

Official Harrison County Republican Primary Election Returns
JUNE 6, 1916.

Table with columns for various offices: United States Senator, Congress, Third District, Governor, Secretary of State, Sup't. of Schools, State Auditor, State Treasurer, Attorney General, Comr. of Agriculture, Sheriff, Prosecuting Attorney, House of Delegates, County Assessor, County Com'r, Member Com. Committee. Rows list candidates and their vote counts across various precincts.

"JACK" CURLEY IS HEADED THIS WAY

One of World's Leading Sport Promoters Will Be with the Circus June 21.

Jack Curley, one of the world's leading sport promoters and a man known internationally as a doer of huge things, will be with us soon. Jack is now advance man of the Sells-Floto circus, an aggregation this year that surpassed by a wide margin any similar traveling organization that ever was thrown open to the public. It will show here June 21. This may sound like a broad statement but Curley will vouch for it, and to back up his claim points proudly to the fact, in a letter just received from him, that he never told anything but the truth in his life. "Just wait until you get a chance to see our circus this year and you will swear that you never saw anything that ever approached it," Jack writes, showing that he is all swollen up over his new job.

"You see, we've got a man at the head of this organization who isn't afraid to spend a world of money to make it the best. His name is Harry Tammen and he is absolutely in control. The circus is a mere jact of his and not run as a money making proposition. It's a millionaire plaything. To give you an idea of how much he thinks of his circus and his people, he laid out an expenditure of $300,000 last winter for an entire new equipment. This includes new canvas, every yard of it being brand new. There isn't a rope in the whole outfit, everything being handled by steel cables. Not an inch of canvas ever touches the ground as there is a system of giant wheels on which the canvas is wound, after the circus is through in a town. Everything is done with denkey engines and big steam tractors, so that the lowly horse now is used only in the street parades and for show purposes under the canvas. The canvas is wound after the circus to drag the heavy wagons. The tractors do that. Thus does Jack rave about his circus but the main point with Jack is the big athletic feature that he is so deeply interested in. The Sells-Floto circus now has under contract two world's champions, Jess Willard, boss boxer of them all, and Frank Gotch, best wrestler in the world at catch-as-catch-can style. Also with the circus are Earl Caddock, an out-and-out candidate for a chance at the title, and other famous fellows of mat and ring that the athletic bugs would be glad to see. Then there are Jack Curley and Tom Jones, partners in the management of Willard, who are a whole show in themselves. Harry Tammen of Denver, managing owner of the big circus, is one of the real sportsmen of the day. Because of his tremendous care in keeping things in Colorado well managed and clean, as owner of the Denver Post he has frequently been referred to as "the watchdog of the Rockies" and he is willing to accept that title with all that it implies. He got into the circus business in a most peculiar manner. He staked an old friend to a bunch of coin to take out a dog and pony circus and kept sweetening the pot for two seasons of bad business. At the end of that time his friend, thoroughly disgusted with the business and utterly unable to make it go, turned the whole thing over to Mr. Tammen. "I'll make it go," Tammen declared when he found out that he had a lot of pets on his hands that he didn't fancy. That was the start of the Sells-Floto circus and it has grown under Tammen's wonderful management into the greatest amusement enterprise of the present day. When Curley gets into town well hear the inside dope as to whether Gotch is going to wrestle Joe Stecher for the world's wrestling title and what Jess Willard is going to do about fighting in the near future. Curley is a mine of information and never objects to anybody digging into that mine, so we'll get the big earful as soon as Jack lands here.

NOTICE: I will not be responsible for any debts contracted by anyone other than myself, after this date. HORACE J. BROWN. May 25, 1916. ANNUAL MEETING OF THE STOCKHOLDERS OF THE J. E. DOMAN OIL COMPANY. Stockholders of the J. E. Doman Oil Company: You will please take notice that the annual meeting of the stockholders of the J. E. Doman Oil Company will be held on June 20th, 1916, at a clock, a. m., in the central and business office of the said Company at No. 14 Chapel street, Clarksville, West Va., County of Harrison.